

Wellington's Victory

The Battle of Waterloo
18 June 1815

This revamped version of the SPI classic game on the battle of Waterloo presents a battlefield covered by four maps with natural contours showing elevations, and terrain features including chateaux, villages, farms, walls, woods, hedges, sunken roads, slopes, streams, and marshes. The vividly colored combat units are infantry battalions, cavalry squadrons, artillery batteries, and engineer detachments. The streamlined game mechanics use a single dice roll to inflict casualties and disorder. Unit capability can be enhanced by a number of formations, tactics, and leaders. Success comes from careful use of different arms and tactics and a good eye for terrain; finesse trumps brute strength. Hidden movement allows for nasty surprises, particularly from the arriving Prussians. Multiple scenarios include a number of short learning scenarios. It's all here, from massive cavalry charges to grand bombardments to skirmishing to wild melees, with the fate of Europe in the balance.
